Illness is one of the few places in the modern world where we have an experience of a power greater than the human. Like a great storm not of our own making, it strikes us down despite our best efforts, uprooting life-orienting features in the landscape of our lives.

Musician, storyteller and Jungian therapist David Palomo will explore with us some of the ways of cultivating meaning when illness disrupts the familiar landscape of our lives. Using the symbolic themes of Norma's Garden at the Gathering Place, we will experience ways to attend to new varieties of growth that can appear in our lives during and after the disruptions of illness. Please bring a journal and pen to write down your reflections. Bring an umbrella in case it's raining during a brief trip through Norma's Garden.
